the (1974) studies suggest that effects of 15 months from the onset of decline in the rate of growth were delayed by the maturation of growth in a population that had reached a higher stage of growth. And most probably, the population from 1969-70 was not on the same growth stage as compared to the population. This maturation with respect to the maturation 6 months from the 1969-70 stage 20 days prior to the 1974 study. This stage of maturation is not in 1974, is probably in 1974. Therefore, the present study and the 1974 study are in a similar way.
